Do I have to respond to the case my spouse started? It depends. You have 4 options:

1. You can do nothing — which means that whatever your spouse or domestic partner is asking for in the Petition will probably be granted, as long as it's a fair division of your property and debts together. The judge will base their decision about property, support, and custody and visitation (if you have children together) only on what your spouse or domestic partner asked for in their paperwork.
2. You can do nothing because you and your spouse will be able to reach, and sign, an agreement on every part of your divorce case like property and debts, support, and custody and parenting time (if you have children together). If you want to do this, you will have to give your spouse your financial information (Step 3).
3. You can file a response with the court, but also reach an agreement with your spouse or domestic partner about all the issues.
4. You can file a response and disagree with what your spouse or domestic partner is asking for.

How much time do I have to respond?

You have 30 days from the day you were served with papers to respond.

After 30 days, your spouse can ask for a default judgment if you have not responded. That means that the judge may make orders without you having any say.

How much will it cost?

The court fee to respond is $435. If you ask for court dates along the way, there may be more fees.

If you're low income or your expenses are very high compared to your income, you may not have to pay any fees. Use forms FW-001 and FW-003 to ask for a fee waiver.

How long does it take to get divorced?

At least 6 months and 1 day after your spouse is served. There is no waiting period of a legal separation. But you must turn in the final papers or ask for a trial to finish your case. The court will NOT finish it for you.

Where do I go to turn in my papers? Hours: 8:30 a.m.-3:00 p.m

Ukiah Courthouse, Room 107
100 N. State Street, Ukiah, CA 95482

Fort Bragg, Ten Mile Courthouse, lobby window
700 S. Franklin Street, Fort Bragg, CA 95437

You can also file online, called e-filing: Go to <https://www.mendocino.courts.ca.gov/e-filing>.

Will the court make orders about child custody, child support, or spousal support before the divorce is final?

Only if you ask for them. If you need temporary orders, use a Request for Order (FL-300). There is an additional fee for a Request for Order, but if you have a fee waiver, you do not have to pay it. The Request for Order form may not be the only form you need, and there are other steps you should know about. Get help.

➔ If you ask for a custody order, you & your spouse will be sent to mediation. If you can't agree in mediation, the judge will make the decision.

What is a Case Management Conference?

A Case Management Conference (or CMC) is a short hearing to check whether the people getting divorced are moving the case along. It is scheduled for 5-6 months after someone files for a divorce, then every 5-6 months until the case is finished. Turn in a Family Law Case Status Report (MFL-251) beforehand.
